MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE DEAD CHILD .- BY CHARLES LAND.

I saw wherein the shroud did lurk A curious piece of nature's work A flowret crushed in the bud, A nameless maid, in babyhood, Was in her cradle coffin lying, Extinct, with scarce a show of dying; So soon to exchange th' imprisoning womb For darker prison of the tomb! She did but one an eye, and put A clear beam forth-then straight up shut For the long dark; ne'er more to see Through glasses of mortality. Riddle of destiny! who can show What thy short visit meant, or know What thy errand here below! Shall we say that nature, blind, Check'd her hand, and chang'd her mind. Just when she had exactly wrought A finish'd pattern without fault? Could she flag, or could she tire! Or lacked she the Promethean fire, (With her tedious workings sicken'd) That should thy little limbs have quicken'd? Limbs, so firm, they seemed to assure Life of health and days mature; Womanhood in miniature! Limbs so fair they might supply (Themselves now but cold imagery) The sculptor to make beauty by! Or did the stern eyed Fate descry That, babe or mother, one must die; So, in mercy, left the stock
And cut the branch, to save the shock Of young years widow'd, and the pain When single state comes back again To the lorn man, who, 'reft of wife, There forward drags a maimed life? The economy of Heaven is dark; And wisest clerks have missed the mark, Why Heaven's bud's, like this, should tali More brief than fly ephemeral, That has his day, while shrivel'd crones Stiffen with age to stocks and stones, And crabbed use the conscience sears, In sinners of an hundred years. Mother's prattle, mother's kiss, Baby fond, thou ne'er wilt miss, Rites, which custom does impose; Silver bells and baby clothes; Corals redder than these lips Which pale death did late eclipse; Music framed for infant's glee, Whistle never tuned for thee; [them Though thou want'st not, thou shalt have (Loving hearts were they which gave them.) Let not one be missing, nurse, See them laid upon the hearse Of infant, slain by doom perverse-
